PREAMBLE:

The world is in a state of flux which has affected the world of work today. The intensity of diversity, the complexity of office politics and power play, the rapid expansion of remote working, and a host of other developments have significantly altered the face of work and the workplace. The volatility, uncertainty, complexity, and ambiguity in the environment affect different generations differently. These demand the application of emotional intelligence for a conducive work environment and enhanced organizational productivity. Organizations must deal with all of these and still come out more productive than ever before.
